

Song 6 Floods rise up to overwhelm my soul

Psalm 69 – David cries from overwhelming floods (v.1–2), deep mire (v.2), weary calling (v.3), enemies without cause (v.4), reproach for God's sake (v.7–9), plea for rescue (v.13–15), hope in God's salvation (v.29). Foreshadows Christ's suffering (John 15:25; Romans 15:3).

Floods rise up to overwhelm my soul
I sink deep in mire, no solid hold
Waters rush and surge, they sweep o'er me
In unstable depths, I drown in misery

Floods rise up to overwhelm my soul
I sink deep in mire, no solid hold
Waters rush and surge, they sweep o'er me
In unstable depths, I drown in misery

I call and call to You till weary grown
My throat is parched, dry as desert stone
For Your sake I wait, my eyes grow dim
Do not hide Your face from me, O God within

I call and call to You till weary grown
My throat is parched, dry as desert stone
For Your sake I wait, my eyes grow dim
Do not hide Your face from me, O God within

Those who hate without cause multiply
In vain they rise as foes, strong and sly
They force me to repay what I never took
For my enemies' sake, come save and look

I call and call to You till weary grown
My throat is parched, dry as desert stone
For Your sake I wait, my eyes grow dim
Do not hide Your face from me, O God within

To my brothers I became a stranger
To my mother's sons, an alien danger
The insults aimed at You fall on me
Zeal for Your house consumes me utterly

I call and call to You till weary grown
My throat is parched, dry as desert stone
For Your sake I wait, my eyes grow dim
Do not hide Your face from me, O God within

I fasted, wept, my soul in grief decayed
For Your sake endured the scorn they made
At my gate they sit and mock with spite
Yet hear me, Lord, by Your salvation's right

I call and call to You till weary grown
My throat is parched, dry as desert stone
For Your sake I wait, my eyes grow dim
Do not hide Your face from me, O God within

Let not the floods roll over me, I plead
Let not the deep swallow me in its need
Lift me up before I sink and drown
From sinking waters, pull me safe and sound

Let not the floods roll over me, I plead
Let not the deep swallow me in its need
Lift me up before I sink and drown
From sinking waters, pull me safe and sound

I call and call to You till weary grown
My throat is parched, dry as desert stone
For Your sake I wait, my eyes grow dim
Do not hide Your face from me, O God within
